五、閱讀測驗單選題：閱讀下文後，根據文意選出一個最適當的答案〈每題3分，共15分〉

Speaking as a Chinese, I do not think that any civilization can be called complete until it has made a conscious return to simplicity of thinking and living. In addition, I believe that the world is far too serious, and it has need of a wise and merry philosophy. The philosophy of the Chinese art of living can certainly be called the "gay science". After all, only a gay philosophy is profound philosophy; the serious philosophies of the West haven't even begun to understand what life is. To me personally, the only function of philosophy is to teach us to take life more lightly and gayly than the average businessman does. The world can be made a more peaceful and more reasonable place to live in only when each man has filled his mind with the light gayety. Unfortunately, the modern man takes life far too seriously, and the world is full of troubles.

41. Before a civilization makes a conscious return to simplicity of thinking, it is
  - A. incomplete.
  - B. gayly.
  - C. serious.
  - D. profound.
